The Clown of the Party

Jill Blackstead is a professional party clown. She uses the name "Tiddlywink" and performs at children's parties. Jill has been working as a party clown for more than ten years. Her career began when she was still at school. She wanted to make a little extra money to buy CDs and clothes, so she began organising children's parties. Her parties became very popular and soon she was doing more than eight parties a month. Today, Jill works as a party clown almost every day. She makes a lot of money and really enjoys her work.

Jill wears the usual clown costume – a red nose, a big hat and funny shoes. She doesn't wear any make-up because this often frightens young children. Over the years, she has improved her programme. Her parties include face painting, magic, silly games and balloon animals.

Jill has just won an award for being the best party clown in New York. So what is her secret? Jill believes that a party clown must try to make children feel happy. While she is painting faces or making balloons, she makes sure to talk to the children and to ask them questions. She has also noticed that every year there are two or three words that kids think are funny. When things are not going well at the party, she just shouts one of these words and the kids immediately start laughing.

Anger Management

"I was in hospital. Earlier that morning, I'd got angry and hit a window with my hand. I'd broken the glass and hurt my hand and wrist. Luckily, they weren't broken." Amanda, 13

"I kicked a classmate after he'd insulted me. I was furious, and acted without thinking." Steve, 15

"I didn't want to speak to my parents because they hadn't let me go to a music festival with my friends." Sally, 16

Probably everyone occasionally feels like Amanda, Steve or Sally – furious enough to hurt themselves or someone else, or angry about something for days. However, not everyone acts in a harmful way because of these feelings. That's a big difference. It's normal to feel angry, but it's important to control it. This control is called "anger management".

There are good reasons to learn anger management. Most importantly, it stops us from saying or doing something we'll be sorry about. Second, if you don't control your anger, you won't make friends easily. Finally, proper anger management can prevent health problems such as heart disease and back pain later in life.

Anger management experts have developed practical techniques for controlling anger. One suggestion is simple: when you feel you're about to lose control of your words or actions, walk away from the situation. If that's impossible, try a quick relaxation exercise. This helps because anger causes the heart to beat faster and the muscles to become tense. Count slowly to ten or imagine a peaceful place and relax your muscles. This will help you become calmer, so you can respond properly to the situation.

In situations such as Sally's, experts advise finding a solution to the situation. If that doesn't work and you're still angry, the relaxation technique will help. In addition, exercise regularly. This will release endorphins and these brain chemicals are known to make you feel good. Other helpful activities are writing in a journal, drawing, painting, dancing, playing an instrument and listening to music. Try practising these anger management techniques when you feel angry. Maybe they'll help you.

City Life

In the 1940s, it became fashionable for families in the United States to go and live outside the cities and buy houses in the quiet suburbs. Living in the suburbs was especially popular for people who had young children. They often chose to leave the city so that the children could have more green areas to play in. But recently, things have begun to change. More and more people are now choosing to remain in the cities and not move to the suburbs. They feel that city life has got many advantages. People are often able to get to work on foot. They can also walk to restaurants and cinemas. Not only is this very convenient, but it is also better for the environment, because people use much less petrol. Some of the people in the suburbs are also moving back to the city. Many parents living in the suburbs have found that when their children become teenagers, they have nowhere to go in their free time. They often have to drive their children into the city so that they can meet their friends at trendy places. Because more and more people want to live in the city, house prices are rising. If prices continue to rise, many people will leave the city because they will no longer be able to afford to live there. If this happens and poorer people begin to move to the suburbs, the big family houses of today will become the apartment buildings of the future. Several families will live together in each of the houses. Life in the suburbs, as we know it, will soon be a thing of the past ...

Running a Marathon

The marathon is a long-distance running race. Its official distance is 42.195 kilometres and it is usually run as a road race. The name "marathon" comes from an Ancient Greek legend. According to the legend, in 490 BC, a Greek messenger by the name of Pheidippides was sent from Marathon to Athens to inform the government that the Greek army won their battle against the Persians. He ran the whole distance without stopping. When he arrived, he delivered his message and then fell down and died.

No-one knows if the legend of Pheidippides is actually true. But even if it isn't, it is very well known in Greece. When the first modern Olympic Games were held in 1896 in Athens, Pierre de Coubertin, the organiser of the games, decided to include a marathon race in honour of this legend. He wanted to remind the world of the power Greece once had.

Since the modern Olympic Games were started, it has become a tradition for the Olympic marathon to be the last event of the games. But ordinary marathons are open to everyone. More than 800 major marathons are run around the world every year. Many of the participants in these races aren't athletes. It takes some participants a long time to complete the race, but they receive a finisher's medal just like every other participant.

The more "serious" marathon runners are not happy that so many slow runners participate in marathons. They feel that marathons have become community events and that they are no longer the competitive races they once were. But what's wrong with that? Pheidippides wasn't a professional runner. If he had walked to Athens or had stopped along the way, marathon running would probably never have become a sport. In any case, it doesn't seem probable that the organisers of these events will prevent slower runners from participating since they pay like everyone else. Marathons inspire people to get off their couches and exercise, and that's always a positive thing.

A

- 1.Pheidippides wouldn't have delivered the message about the Greeks' victory
- 2.If Pheidippides hadn't run to Athens,

2. Read the text. Then answer the questions.Mobile Phones, Food and Bees

Mobile phones have become very common in our lives and many people cannot imagine life without one. Mobile phones make life easier in many ways and they can be a lot of fun too. But some scientists are worried about this "love" of the mobile phone. According to these scientists, mobile phones may cause a food shortage in the world one day. And this all has to do with bees.

In recent years, the number of bees in the USA, Europe and Britain has significantly decreased. It seems bees are mysteriously disappearing. Bees have got an important role in food production. Most of the world's crops depend on bees for pollination. A shortage of bees will affect the amount of food we can produce. So, what is causing the bees to disappear? According to some theories, it's the use of pesticides and chemicals on crops and the changing weather conditions. More recently, scientists have suggested that radiation from mobile phones is confusing the bees and preventing them from finding their way back to their hives. This confusion is resulting in the deaths of many bees.

There is still not enough evidence to prove that there is a direct connection between the use of mobile phones and the disappearance of bees, but scientists are continuing to investigate this strange connection. They understand that they have to try to discover why so many bees are disappearing. If they don't, there won't be enough food for people around the world one day.

Eating at Mars 2112

Are you interested in trying a different kind of restaurant? Then Mars 2112 is the place for you. Mars 2112 is a popular restaurant in New York City. But it's not an ordinary restaurant. People don't come to Mars 2112 for the food. They come for an interesting and fun experience.

The name "Mars 2112" comes from the red planet – Mars. From the moment you enter the restaurant, you feel you are in a different world. When you arrive, you sit in a "spaceship" – a round room with some chairs in front of a screen. There are a lot of lights and the room begins to move. On the screen, you see pictures of a rocket, stars and planets. You feel you are really flying in a spaceship. A few minutes later, you "land" on Mars – well, actually the dining room. It has got a very high ceiling and rocky walls and the light in the room is red. The dining room is very big and has got room for 500 people. It's easy to identify the waiters because they are all wearing spacesuits.

Mars 2112 is a fun place to go, but eating there is expensive. It costs a few dollars just to enter the restaurant. And what about the food? Everything on the menu has got a Martian name – like Full Moon Pizza, Martian Soup or Red Star Fried Chicken. The food is not very good according to some restaurant reviews, so if you feel like having a gourmet meal, this is not the restaurant for you. But most of the customers at Mars 2112 are happy. UNIT 71. Read the text. What do the numbers below refer to?*rubbish Island on the Maldives

The Maldives are a group of beautiful tropical islands in the Indian Ocean. But the Maldives have got a dirty secret: Thilafushi, the world's biggest rubbish island. Ships bring more than 330 tonnes of rubbish to Thilafushi every day from all over the Maldives. Workers burn some of the rubbish and put the rest in the ground. The Maldivians built Thilafushi in 1992. At that time, they were looking for a place to throw out their rubbish. Nearly 100,000 people were living in Malé, the capital city, and they were producing a lot of rubbish every day. Malé is only two square kilometres, so there was nowhere for all this rubbish to go. The government decided to build Thilafushi to solve this problem.

Today, the Maldives are a very popular destination. More than 10,000 tourists arrive every week and each tourist produces 3.5 kg of rubbish. Environmentalist Ali Rilwan is worried about the problem. In 2009, he told reporters that waste was polluting the lagoon around Thilafushi. He said that it could cause health problems in the future. The situation has only got worse since then. Another square metre of rubbish is brought to the island every day.

Today, there is not much space on Thilafushi, so the Maldivians are sending some of their rubbish to India. Ships come to the Maldives to bring vegetables from India. In the past, the ships returned to India empty, but today they return with empty cans, metals and cardboard. When they arrive in India, the Indians sell everything for recycling.

The rubbish crisis in the Maldives is getting worse every day, but the tourists know nothing about the problem. The tourists continue to swim in the blue sea and sunbathe on the sandy beaches. They have got no idea about the rubbish island only a short distance away. The president of the Maldives, Mohamed Nasheed, recently told the Guardian, a British newspaper, that one day his people would need to use the money from tourists to buy a new country. There has got to be a better solution than this.

UNIT 81. Read the text. Then answer the questions.*a British Tradition at Christmas

On Christmas Day, families all over Britain sit around their tables and eat Christmas lunch. People at the table wear paper hats. Where do these paper hats come from? The answer is the Christmas cracker. A Christmas cracker is a paper tube. It is covered in colourful paper. The idea is for two people to hold the ends of the cracker and pull it. When the cracker is pulled apart, it makes a loud sound. Inside the cracker there is a paper hat, a little gift and a joke written on a piece of paper. The same jokes have appeared in Christmas crackers for years, so they are very well known.

Christmas crackers were invented in the 1850s by a man called Tom Smith. He made money by selling sweets and chocolates. They were wrapped in paper and one day he decided to put a short message in the packages. Many of his sweets were bought by men to give to women, so most of the messages were simple love poems. People liked reading the messages in the packages and his sweets became more popular.

Over the years, the crackers have changed. Smith changed his packages so they made the loud sound when they were pulled apart. Later, a small gift was put in the cracker instead of the sweet. In the 1900s, the paper hats were added to the cracker by Smith's sons and in the 1930s, the love poems were replaced by jokes. Many people bought the crackers at Christmas, so they were called Christmas crackers. Today at Christmas, there is at least one box of crackers to pull in nearly every home in Britain. Perhaps even the Queen wears her paper hat at Christmas lunch!
