Don't ever tell anybody anything. If you do, you start missing everybody. I remembered when my mother used to tell me that everyday. She was very protective over me, and she didn't want anyone to know about my dad's job, I guess she only wanted to keep me safe.

My dad was the owner of Landow's laboratory, he was trying to elaborate a vaccine that would free us from the global pandemic that was going on, the sad thing was that he was experimenting on human beings. My father was crazy, he thought he was protecting the rest of the society, but in fact he was a murderer. At first, no one realized that some deaths were caused by my dad, but then he started taking massive groups of people to his lab and they wouldn't come back. People from our hometown started thinking that my parents were involved. I couldn't handle that situation and I had to expose him. But now, here I am, hidden in a shelter for over three months praying not to be found by neither my parents nor the Landow's mafia, otherwise they would probably kill me, but I understand. I betrayed them.

My mother told me that I would miss everyone if I told anyone about their secret. She was right, I miss everything. I miss my normal life and I miss my friends. I wonder every day if it would've been any better, hadn't I said anything.
